Tennis Academy making good progress

ANGUILLA—The state-of-the-art tennis facility being built at Blowing Point by the Anguilla Tennis Academy (ATA) is progressing very well. The cisterns have been poured, the foundation is being filled and poured.

Mitchelle Lake, President of the ATA praised the team for their outstanding job in moving the project forward. The Project Chairman is Walton Fleming, the Project Manager, Hugo Rey, Contractor Jeff Richardson, with Gavin Richardson (electric contract) and Buxton Gumbs (plumbing contract).

Lake says the facility will be a symbol of national pride, the project was conceptualized by an Anguillian and should be fully supported by the Anguillian community. He is urging the public to contribute to the project by purchasing a brick or making a pledge with funding or in kind, “Lay a brick for the foundation of our children” is the slogan. Bricks will be inscribed with the name of the donors or other designated names.

Lake thanked the Government, the National Bank of Anguilla, Social Security and Caribbean Commercial Bank for their generous contributions. “My hope is that other businesses and persons in the country will also get involved and pledge support for this worthwhile project,” he said.

It has been designed by Myron Goldfinger and includes six lighted tennis courts, a stadium court with seating for more than a thousand, and a main building with conference room, bathroom facilities, offices, a pro shop and lounge area. When the construction of the main building is nearing completion the tennis courts will be built.
